

Universiteit Utrecht

Digital identities, connectivity & rights of migrant youth: a relational perspective

—

Dr. Koen Leurs

Department of Media & Culture,
Utrecht University

*Conference on children's rights
in the migration crisis
and in the digital environment*

Council of Europe ///

*Estonian Institute of Human Rights
Tallinn, Estonia 3-4 November 2016*

+16

A group of young men posed for a selfie on Eftalou beach after reaching the island of Lesbos in a rubber boat from Turkey

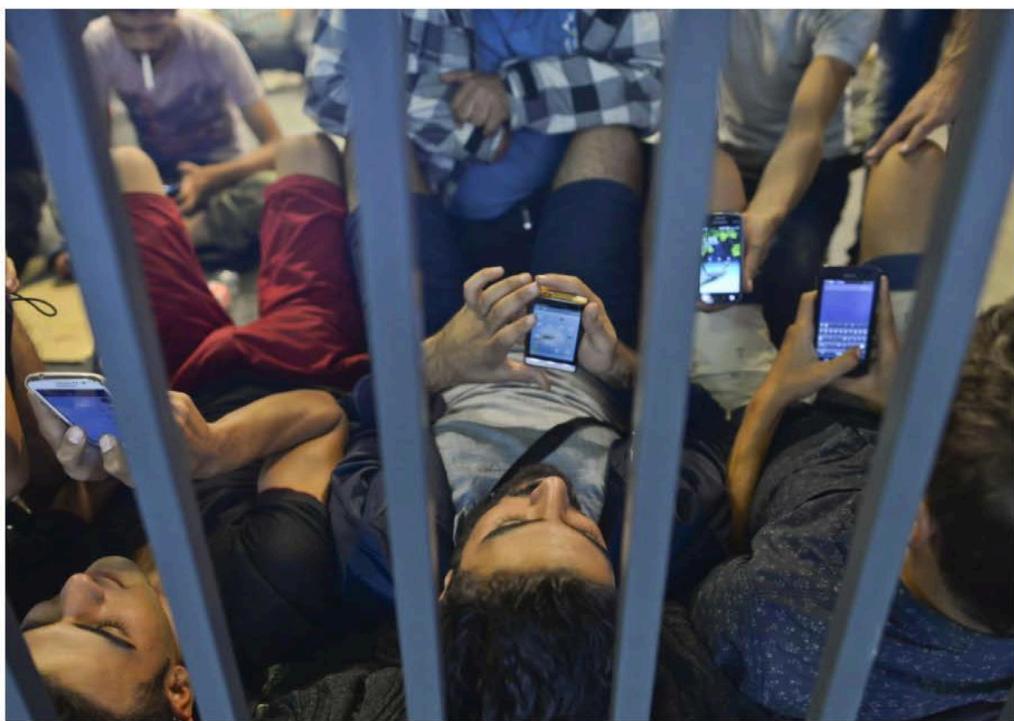

Voices > Comment

Surprised that Syrian refugees have smartphones? Sorry to break this to you, but you're an idiot

You don't need to be a white westerner to own a relatively cheap piece of technology

James O'Malley | Monday 7 September 2015 | 15 comments

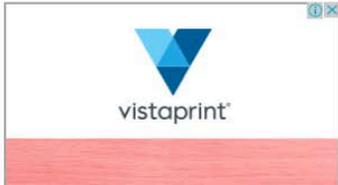

f t e 161K shares

Refugees at Budapest Railway station check their phones Artur Widak/NurPhoto/REX

"Refugees" aka invaders pose for selfies in Greece with their fresh haircuts and iPhones...
dailymail.co.uk/news/article-3...

"Hey, those people fleeing war in Syria aren't poor at all! Look, they all have smartphones!" is one increasingly tedious complaint that has been bubbling away on social media recently. Owning a mobile phone, it seems, should render one ineligible for help when trying to stop themselves and their families from dying in a war.

“Parties undertake to respect the right of the child to preserve his or her identity, including nationality, name and family relations...” (CRC, 1989, 8.1)

“The child shall have the right to freedom of expression ... regardless of frontiers, ... through any ... media of the child’s choice” (CRC, 1989, 13.1).

“All human rights that exist offline must also be protected online” (European Council, 2014)

“When people perform digital acts in or by saying and doing ‘I, we, they have a right to’, they enact themselves as citizen subjects; they are making digital rights claims” (Isin & Ruppert, 2015, p. 69)

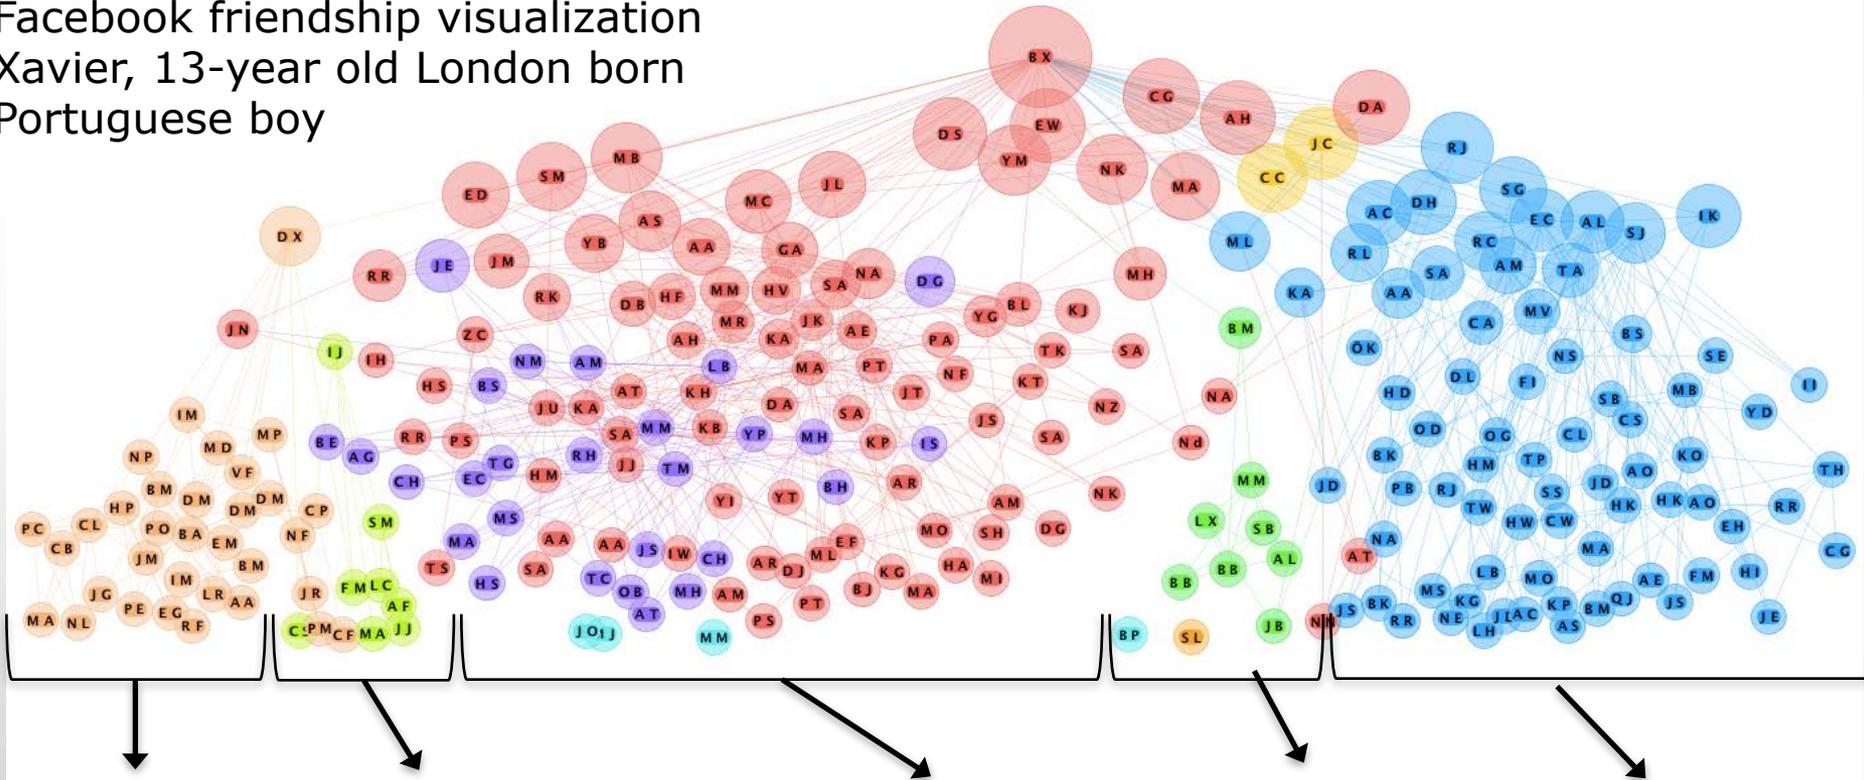

Thinking relationally about connectivity

| Encapsulation | Cosmopolitanism |
|--------------------------------------|------------------------|
| Transnational | International |
| Essence | Multiplicity |
| Homogeneity | Heterogeneity |
| Birds-of-a-feather flock together | Difference |
| Purity | Hybridity |
| Sedentary | Nomadic |
| Segregation & isolation | Integration |
| Radicalization | Public sphere |
| Continuity | Change |
| Migrants (refugees, guest labourers) | Expats |

Young connected migrants

Facebook friendship visualization
Xavier, 13-year old London born
Portuguese boy

‘Portuguese people living here, in London’

‘actually, they are all living in Portugal’

‘secondary school’

‘these are people that I cross on the street’

‘they are kind of primary school-ish’

Migrant youth identities are dynamic, not fixed:

- 1) *Identifying with ones "roots" (Gilroy, 1993).
*"shared cultural codes which provide us, as "one people," with stable, unchanging and continuous frames of reference and meaning" (Hall, 1990, p. 223)
- 2) * Orientation towards new contexts "routes" (Gilroy, 1993)
* "a matter of 'becoming' ... identities undergo constant transformation" (Hall, 1990, 225)

Following

...

175 posts

834 followers

635 following

a bitch

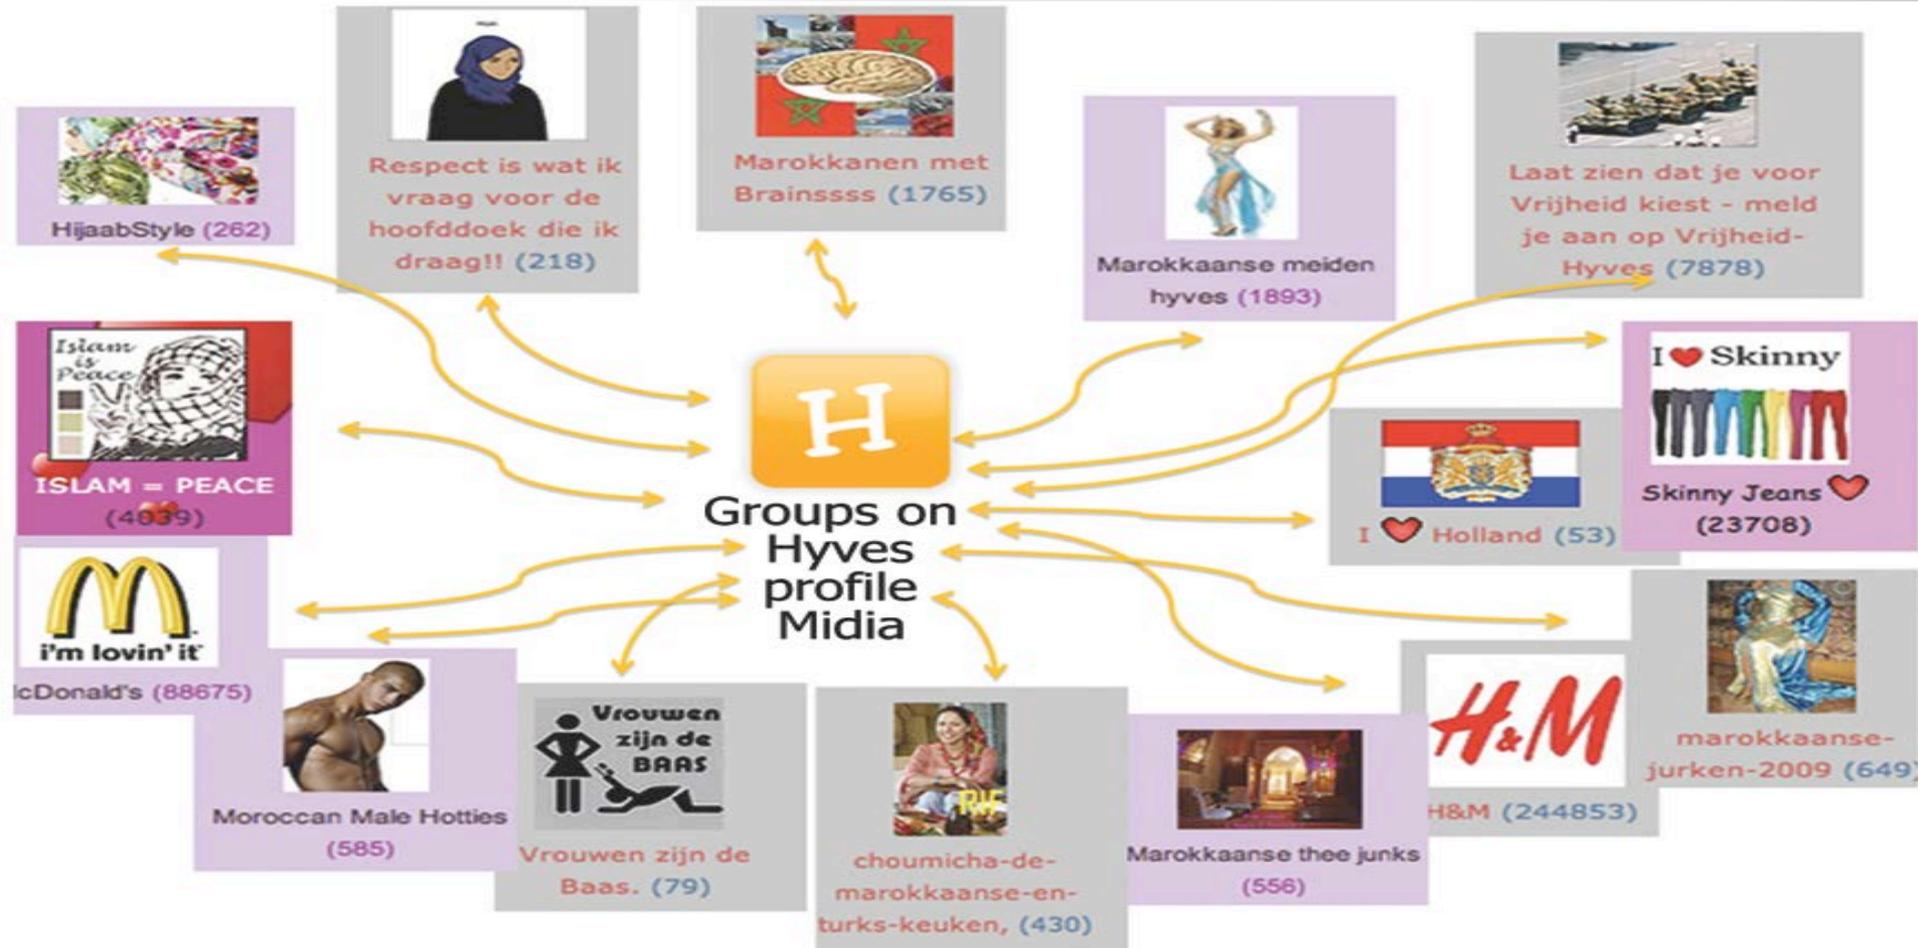

NeThErIAnDs 🇳🇱 HaArLeM♥ SyRiAn 🇸🇾 🕶️ not arabic 😞 Life is

1993 واثق الخطى يمشي ملكاً Follow me=follow back Single

Instagram J, 23-year-old young man from Syria living in the Netherlands

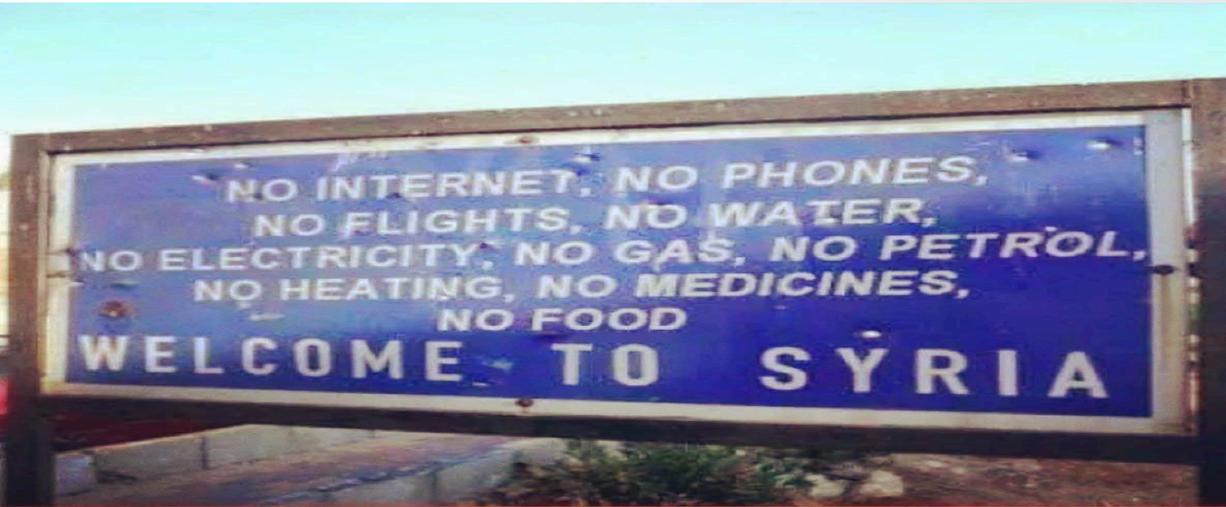

Intersectionality

How do age, race/ethnicity, gender, class, diaspora, nation, youth culture together impact upon identification / oppression?

Hyves social media profile Midia, 13 years old girl born in the Netherlands to parents who migrated from Morocco

Re-value ethnic heritage & marker of individuality:

Instagram J, 23,
from Syria living in the Netherlands

Also used to inform and contest stereotypes:

"I love my country, say when my mum is cooking like really nice food, I might take a picture of it and put it up, and then people will see like your national food and delicacies... to show like you are happy and proud of it, and like inform people, cos people might stereotype it"

- Dave, 17-years-old, "born here in the UK, my parents were born in Nigeria"

"what do we have today, we have a multicultural society, so sometimes Facebook can be good, cos you can learn each others culture, other religions and stuff like that, from it"
(Chenise, 21-year-old "mixed-race" young Londoner)

"I like to kind of engage with people from different backgrounds cos it makes you open-minded" (Sarah, 17-year-old woman, born in London, "from Pakistan")

Henry, 18-year-old 'Half French half Japanese', young Londoner: 'It helps me to be more of an all-round person'.

But migrant youth also have to negotiate racism, discrimination, hate and bullying on social media on the basis of religion, race and gender differences.

هولندا في القلب

Home

- About
- Photos
- Reviews
- Likes
- Videos
- Posts

Create a Page

Liked Message Save More

هولندا في القلب

14 mins ·

إلغاء تكلفة الجوال الهاتفي في أوروبا منتصف العام المقبل ..

The Abolition of the cost of mobile phone in Europe in the middle of next year..

Hide original · Rate this translation

Community

4.9 ★★★★★

Search for posts on this Page

40,305 people like this

4.9 of 5 stars · 20 reviews

Invite friends to like this Page

هنا هولندا

@syrians.netherlands

Home

- About
- Photos
- Likes
- Videos
- Posts

Create a Page

Liked Message Save More

Status Photo / Video

Write something on this Page...

Community

Search for posts on this Page

58,172 people like this

هنا هولندا

2 hrs ·

Jo, 'hacktivist', from Damascus

Thank you

- Migrant youth are young 'connected migrants'
- Digital identity & connectivity are human right claims
- Migrant youth digital identities combine roots & routes
- 'Information precarity' possible obstacle to integration
- Practices are 'digitally divided'

See also:

Leurs, K. (2015). Digital Passages. Migrant Youth 2.0. Diaspora, Gender & Youth Cultural Intersections. Amsterdam: Amsterdam University Press (free open access download)

